

Mr. Speaker, I know you join with me in saying thank you to Bob Ferguson for his years of loyal service to me, to the men and women of Texas' Eighth Congressional District, and to this great institution.

TRIBUTE TO THE FEDERATION
LIFE INSURANCE OF AMERICA IN THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

HON. GERALD D. KLECZKA

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 4, 1996

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Federation Life Insurance of America in the State of Wisconsin, in recognition of its 25th National Quadrennial Convention, held on September 1, 1996.

From its incorporation in Wisconsin in 1913 to the present, the Federation Life Insurance of America has remained an active and successful fraternal organization. Second and third generations of Americans of Polish descent, as well as members from diverse ethnic and cultural backgrounds, continue to enjoy the benefits of Federation Life's sound fiscal management and strong commitment to service. As a fraternal organization, Federation Life sponsors a variety of social and cultural activities, contributing to a strong sense of community and good quality of life.

Congratulations to Federation Life Insurance of America on its 25th national convention. I commend Federal Life's service to its members and their communities and extend my best wishes for a bright and successful future.

TRIBUTE TO THE TOWN OF NINETY SIX, SC

HON. LINDSEY O. GRAHAM

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 4, 1996

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to and congratulate the town of Ninety Six, SC, which is having its 1996 centennial celebration on Friday, September 6, 1996.

The town of Ninety Six, located in Greenwood County has a distinctive history dating from the mid-1700's. During colonial times, the trading settlement began to grow around the 96th milepost on a trail from the Lower Cherokee capital, Keowee, thus giving this town its name.

Noted for its historical significance, Ninety Six played an important role in the Revolutionary War. It was the site of the first revolutionary battle in the South on November 19–21, 1775. The British overtook this settlement and fortified it as an important strategic fort. This settlement existed until after a second battle for the area that was ultimately won by the British. Shortly after the attempted siege of the fort, the British abandoned the area. The town grew and was renamed Cambridge after the College of Cambridge which was built after the Revolutionary War. During the 1800's, the village became a ghost town. In 1852, the town assumed its original name, when the second railroad in South Carolina was built through the area.

Ninety Six is also historic in the States rights debate. In 1856, 10,000 citizens came out to honor Congressman Preston S. Brooks with a dinner in vindication of his assault on Charles Sumner of Massachusetts on the Senate floor for a speech insulting to South Carolina and Senator Butler of South Carolina.

Today, Ninety Six is comprised of a population of 2,200 with industry ranging from retail firms to manufacturing plants and textiles. Located near Lake Greenwood and Ninety Six National Park Historic Site, Ninety Six provides many opportunities to enjoy this area's natural beauty.

It is my pleasure to honor this historic town and its people on this day.

IN HONOR OF REPRESENTATIVE
JIM BUNNING

HON. FRANK WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 4, 1996

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise in support of our colleague, Representative JIM BUNNING, who was recently inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY.

JIM has earned the respect and admiration of many across the country through his hard work and dedication to excellence. These trials have not only helped JIM during his tenure in the House, but throughout his long and distinguished major league baseball career. In the House, JIM has been a leader in preserving Social Security, and his fair-minded style as chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee has earned him deserved praise from both sides of the aisle. His determination and diligence is admired by all.

Of course, his legacy to the sport of baseball is well known. As a pitcher with the Philadelphia Phillies, he was a fan favorite. The Phillies recently celebrated his accomplishments with a JIM BUNNING Day at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia. JIM won 224 games throughout his big league career and tossed two nohitters as well. He has never backed down from a challenge, whether from an opposing hitter or an opponent in Congress, and I know we are all proud of JIM upon his induction to the hall of fame.

I wanted to submit for the RECORD a copy of an outstanding editorial which recently appeared in the Winchester (Virginia) Star in my congressional district. This editorial, written by Adrian O'Connor, does a wonderful job of summing up how much JIM BUNNING has meant to the game of baseball and, more importantly, to our great Nation.

A PITCHER SPEAKS, BUNNING EXPOUNDS ON BASEBALL, AND LIFE

COOPERSTOWN, NY.—He is, frankly, of another time, when Jesuits were Jesuits and still Soldiers of Jesus, and major league ball players were grown men still enthralled with a little boy's game. But, much like another Republican of some renown, Patrick J. Buchanan, Jim Bunning refuses to merely wax nostalgic about the past, his Age of Innocence; he years to re-create it on a modern stage.

Which, in our mind, especially with regard to baseball, would not be all that bad a thing.

In a riveting, albeit lengthy, speech upon his induction here Sunday to baseball's Hall of Fame, Mr. Bunning, the flinty hurler turned politician, leveled his rhetorical sights on all hands involved in what he deems the shameful sully of our National Pastime. To quote John Adams from the hit musical "1776," he "has such a desire to knock heads together." And for good reason. In his view, both owners and players are doing their darndest to destroy a timeless game.

Thus, to the owners, Mr. Bunning said, "Get your house in order. Figure out how you want to share your revenue without going to the players and asking them to foot the bill."

To the players, he added, "Look beyond your contractual obligations. Conduct yourselves as gentlemen. No one player is bigger than the game. Treat the fans with dignity and respect."

And, finally, to both the owners and players, he stated, "Get a commissioner, a real commissioner with restored powers of the commissioner's office prior to 1950 . . . For over four years, baseball has been rudderless. For God's sake, and for the game's sake, find a rudder."

Fans and media alike here last weekend could be forgiven for assuming that Mr. Bunning would not object if he were suddenly cast in the role of "rudder." After all, he has witnessed the game from a variety of perspectives—as hard-nosed Hall of Fame Pitcher, as player representative for a dozen years, and, after his retirement, as a player agent. However, he maintains he has no desire to play powerless wet nurse to the owners, to "28 bosses with such egos." However, if the hue and cry became such, as it did in 1920 when Kenesaw Mountain Landis was extended the task of cleaning up the game, that the office of commissioner was reconstituted (with teeth), then who knows? Perhaps Jim Bunning might be interested.

Until then, he can serve as an advocate for the game—and, by example, for a way of life lost in the modern shuffle. Educated by Jesuits in the pre-Vatican II days, Mr. Bunning, the father of nine, is unabashedly Catholic and conservative, and unabashedly blunt about his beliefs. He is, he says, a product of his father's public-spiritedness—"Get involved," he always told me—"the uncompromising moral approach of the Jesuits, and his wife Mary's prayers and dedication to the homeplace."

But yet, the Kentucky congressman is also a product of that little boy's game he played so superbly. "My life in baseball prepared me well," he told the Induction Day crowd. "I learned that if you set goals high enough, keep trying to achieve them, and work hard, you can do anything you want to do . . . You can overcome your shortcomings with hard work and perseverance."

Advice tendered in Cooperstown, yet well worth hearing in most every city and town the nation over.

SUPPORT THE ANTITERRORISM
PROVISIONS

SPEECH OF

HON. JOHN LINDER

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, August 2, 1996

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this rule that will permit us to bring a number of modest antiterrorism provisions to the House floor under suspension of the rules. These proposals will provide a short-term response to concerns raised from the bombings
